RE: Texas Heritage Music Foundation Presents Texas Living History Day 2007

KERRVILLE, Texas—Texas Heritage Music Foundation will present Texas Living History Day 2007, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28 on the Schreiner University campus.

Billed as “Another Way of Learning Using Stories and Songs,” the 2007 event offers an up-close, hands-on experience. It will showcase over 60 performers and demonstrators, including Native American storytellers and dancers, cowboy poets, humorists and storytellers, Texas singer/songwriters, chuck wagons, teepees and more. This community event also includes a teaching packet for interested educators (www.texasheritagemusic.org). There will be a noon tribute to father of country music Jimmie Rodgers, which will take place at the Robbins-Lewis Pavilion. Living History Day 2007 lasts from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

From 4:00 pm to 6:00 pm, the Texas Folklore Society will offer an afternoon seminar and round-table discussion on many aspects of Texas heritage. Both these events are free and open to the public.

Capping off the day’s events is a concert by guest artist Duke Davis, who will pay tribute to the cowboy through his unique home-on-the-range experience. The public is invited to enjoy his performance and a plate of supper—both served up fresh with a hearty helping of stories and songs. The concert includes the cost of the meal.

Texas Heritage Music Foundation extends thanks to the following sponsors: Texas Commission on the Arts, Schreiner University, Maverick Internet BBS, Glaze Designs of Texas, Kerr Business Services, ACprint, Inc., Kerrville Convention & Visitors Bureau, The Family Sports Center, Dr. Pepper, Culligan Water, Back 40 Supply, Bank of the Hills, Barbara Dunbar Hailey, Dr. Kathleen Hudson, KRVL Radio, Kerrville Sunrise Lions Club and other generous Hill Country businesses and individuals.
